

George Rose- After Korea

“...It gave me confidence with people. Somehow, I don't know... we seemed to grow up, I think, in those two years. I wasn't directly involved with the fighting but were near enough to what was going on. You no longer feel like a boy anymore, you were grown up, you were a man. That's what I felt about it. I think it was the same for all of use who were out there...”